INVISIO Headsets receives several orders from military customers

INVISIO Headsets has received several orders from military customers in Europe and the USA. These orders are for INVISIO's new communication system, INVISIO® X5 headset with hearing protection, together with the INVISIO® X50 control unit.

Customers include the US Navy. The total order value amounts to approximately SEK 2 million.

"We are continuing to break into more and more markets. We consider this proof that INVISIO products offer quality and performance that are at the forefront and are valued more and more by users working in extremely demanding environments," says Lars Højgård Hansen, CEO of INVISIO Headsets.

The orders are for a number of INVISIO® X50 communication units combined with the INVISIO® X5 headset. This is the world's first digital communication system with certified hearing protection and INVISIO's patented Bone Conduction technology, which makes communication possible even under extreme conditions.

By using INVISIO's patented Bone Conduction technology instead of a standard microphone, speech is captured through vibrations in the jawbone instead of from the air. This ensures that communication is always clear and distinct regardless of the noise in the environment. The fitting in the ear forms a seal to keep out ambient noise and produce extremely good sound quality. INVISIO products come in different versions designed to withstand extreme temperatures, the effects of chemicals and water (available in a version for use under water) in addition to being very impact resistant. Examples of customers include police, military and fire departments from all over the world.

With these new orders, INVISIO strengthens its position as a supplier to the military, law enforcement and fire and rescue teams across the globe.
